Hawai'i State Flag

Hawai'i's State Flag was designed for King Kamehameha I in 1816.

It consists of 8 horizontal stripes that represent the 8 major Hawaiian Islands.

Has alternating colors of white, red, and blue.

Incorporates the "British Union Jack"  in the upper left-hand corner. This was added in consideration for when King Kamehameha I placed Hawai'i under the protection of Great Britain.

Hawai'i State Capitol Building

The Capitol Building was dedicated in March 15, 1969. It houses the offices for Hawai'i's Governor, Lieutenant Governor, 51 State Representatives, and 25 State Senators.

The Governor acts as Head of State, meaning he oversees State Departments, grants pardons, and is the Commander-in-Chief of the State's Armed Forces.

The Lieutenant Governor heads special projects delegated by the Governor and serves as the Secretary of State. If the Governor ever has to leave his position, the Lieutenant Governor is the person who would take his place until the next election.
